

About us

Bioethics is an institutionally embedded cross-sectional academic discipline. Both the variety of topics and the methodological approaches open up a wide range of options while breaking up classical disciplinary and faculty structures. The diversity of disciplines and methodological approaches are major challenges for young scientists.

To address these specific issues, the “Young Medical Ethics Network” (JMED) seeks to offer a forum for young researchers in the field of Bioethics.

We aim to develop a better understanding of Bioethics and contribute to the disciplinary and methodological exchange. Moreover, we aim to focus on research topics, possible career options and share previous academic experiences.

Events

Networking

Two meetings are held annually at different locations: a pre-conference workshop as part of the AEM annual conference (September) and a JMED workshop (beginning of the year).

Event organization

The events of the network rotate. Active participation in the planning and organization of our annual workshop is highly appreciated and will be discussed at the meetings.

Membership

Who can become an active member?

- Young scientists in the field of Bioethics: Early career researchers, post-docs and advanced PhD.
- Membership in the Young Medical Ethics Network is free of charge and not necessarily linked to membership in the AEM.

Goals

Network

Apart from regular events, we also provide a virtual forum for young Bioethicists to share professional and personal experiences.

Education and Development

In a safe environment, we aim to discuss, share knowledge and learn from each other. We focus on supporting projects and the exchange of ideas through dialogues with experienced researchers.

Career

We offer the opportunity to share knowledge concerning potential career options and perspectives for Bioethicists.

Peer Mentoring

We provide mutual support for doctoral students and post-docs through a collective set of skills.
